Chinese Classical Dance Seminar

Chinese classical dance schools can be roughly divided into three schools: the traditional opera body rhyme school, the Han-Tang dance school, and the Dunhuang dance school. We are honored to invite Chinese classical dancer Ju, Hao to give us a seminar introducing and performing "Thirty-six poses of the Dunhuang dance".

"Dunhuang Dance" was derived from the Dunhuang murals. It was the outcome of civilization integration between Central China and Western China at ancient Silk Road times. It integrates the dancing styles of Central China, Western China, and Dunhuang local area. The dance genre is charming, unique, classical, and beautiful.

Please check Here for dancer Ju, Hao's introduction.

Eyesight Protection for Kids

Rest assured that the screen itself isn't causing eye damage, but holding any object too close to your face, whether a tablet or a book, has been linked to an increase in myopia or nearsightedness. To reduce the risk, have your kid keep their device at least 18 to 24 inches away and stick to the 20-20-20 rule. "This means that every 20 minutes, you take a 20-second break to look 20 feet away," This resets the eyes' focusing muscles and helps ward off fatigue and strain. Then get outside. It's been shown as one of the most helpful ways to slow nearsightedness in kids as young as 5, so take a trip to the playground or simply stare up at the clouds.

And remind your kid to blink! Eyes rely on this motion to pump out tears, which lubricate their surface. But when looking at a screen, our blink rate decreases from about 40 blinks a minute to only about eight. You can try to have your kids use artificial-tear eye drops before a distance-learning session.

Information above is taken from <https://www.parents.com/health/eyes/could-more-screen-time-be-causing-more-vision-problems-in-kids/>.
